:01

The noise makes me think back to a couple weeks earlier.

Please, not again, I pray.

Not another one.

It 3:17 a.m. (The Lassie Files Book 2) happened two Wednesdays ago.

I woke up as usual at three in the morning. Ingrid was working a case and the side of the bed she slept in three 3:17 a.m. (The Lassie Files Book 2) or four times a week was empty. With Ingrid away, Lassie had snuggled into his second favorite spot, tucked into the small concave of my ribs. (His favorite spot was with his head nestled comfortably between Ingrid's breasts.) I reached my left hand down and stroked his small back. Maybe on the third or fourth stroke, I noticed his fur felt different than usual.

Coarser.

And his tail.

There was no hair on his tail.

I lifted Lassie up and set him on my chest.

"Dude, what happened to you?"

Lassie's usually black and tan face was now white.

His yellow eyes were now the color of coal. 3:17 a.m. (The Lassie Files Book 2)

His perfect little black nose was now pink and protruding. 3:17 a.m. (The Lassie Files Book 2)

It wasn't Lassie.

It was a possum.

I screamed.

---

The possum hissed.

I screamed some more.

It took me ten minutes to get the possum out of my 3:17 a.m. (The Lassie Files Book 2) condo.

It took me another ten minutes to find Lassie hiding in 3:17 a.m. (The Lassie Files Book 2) the dirty clothes hamper. I asked him if he knew anything about the large rodent that I woke up next to in my bed.

He declined to answer and asked 3:17 a.m. (The Lassie Files Book 2) for a lawyer.

Anyhow, the noise this morning is less of a hiss and more of a throat clearing.

I open my eyes.

Lassie is on my chest. His small head slinks backwards and forwards. The sound I woke up to is him hacking something up.

I cringe and ask, "Dude, are 3:17 a.m. (The Lassie Files Book 2) you okay?"

Hack.

Hack.

Hack.

I want to move him off my chest, but I don't want to cause him more agony than he's already in.

I pray this is just a drill. A false alarm.

He hacks three more times. And then it comes out. Directly on my chest. The longest hairball in the history of the known universe.

I take one look at the long, slimy, tubular mass of hair, and I gag.

"Oh my God," I utter.

I will never be able to sleep in this bed again.

I may have to burn it.

I push myself up, wiping the slimy mass off my chest and shout, "Could you seriously not jump off the bed before you did that?"

---

Lassie sniffs at his creation on the bedspread, then glances up at me.

Meow.

“No time? I’ve seen you teleport from the bedroom to the kitchen in half a nanosecond when I open a can of tuna, I think you could have jumped three feet.”

Meow.

“Yes, I suppose I am lucky 3:17 a.m. (The Lassie Files Book 2) that none of it went in my mouth. On that note, I’m gonna go take a shower. I might stay in there the whole hour.”

I jump up and look at the clock on the dresser.

3:02 a.m.

I take a three minute shower — which is two minutes longer than normal — using the loofa Ingrid keeps in the shower to scrub my chest red and raw.

Lassie is standing in the middle of the bathroom when I step out.

Meow.

“You should be sorry. I’m gonna have nightmares about that thing for weeks.”

Meow.

“You want me to call the Guinness Book of 3:17 a.m. (The Lassie Files Book 2) World Records people to come take a look at it?”

Meow.

“I’m not going to do anything with it. You are going to carry it outside in your grubby little teeth and throw it in the river where it can’t hurt anyone ever again.”

Meow.

“Frame it?” I shake my head. “Get out!”

I pull a pair of socks from the top drawer of the dresser and throw 3:17 a.m. (The Lassie Files Book 2) them at him. I miss by a couple inches but am close enough to send 3:17 a.m. (The Lassie Files Book 2) him zipping from the room.

I pull on sweats and a 3:17 a.m. (The Lassie Files Book 2) T-shirt, then turn and stare at the bed. I take two deep breaths. I roll up the sheets and the comforter, and with it, The-Thing-That-Must-Not-Be-Named. I walk the bundle down three flights of stairs and throw it in the dumpster behind the condominium.

When I get back, it's 3:08 a.m.

Lassie is sitting on the back of the couch.

I pick him up with both hands and hold him at eye level. I say, "Please, in the future, try to keep your fur on the outside of your body, or at the very least, 3:17 a.m. (The Lassie Files Book 2) off my body."

He pinky promises.

I set him back down on the couch and he touches his little paw to my pinky.

I 3:17 a.m. (The Lassie Files Book 2) walk into the kitchen.

Ingrid has left a sticky 3:17 a.m. (The Lassie Files Book 2) note on the fridge. It reads, "Caught a double murder last night around eight. Hopefully, I'll see you in a couple days. Love you. P.S. Isabel's enchiladas are insane!"

Ingrid was officially moving in on May 1st, just a little under two weeks from now. Until then, when she and her partner Billy caught a case, she stayed at her apartment, which is a few miles closer to the Alexandria Police Department.

I smile, then open the fridge and pull out a Tupperware container of Isabel's famous enchiladas, which to quote Ingrid, are "insane." Isabel has scribbled on the top with a sharpie, "Heat for dos minutos."

I chuckle then begin heating it in the microwave.

I do push-ups and sit-ups for dos minutos, then scoop half an enchilada into Lassie's bowl, fill up a saucer of milk, and carry everything to the table.

Lassie 3:17 a.m. (The Lassie Files Book 2) and I watch six minutes of Game of Thrones while we eat. When I turn it off, Lassie asks if he can get a dragon. I tell him no.

I make some small tweaks to a couple of my online investments, then text my dad and Ingrid a quick hello, pull on my Asics and leash up Lassie.

Meow.

"Why do you have to be on a leash? Do you not recall what happened last time I let you off-leash?"

Meow.

---

“I WOKE UP WITH A POSSUM IN MY BED!”

Meow.

“Yes, I’m sure you had nothing to do with that.”

Meow.

“Proof? Proof? How about the week before the ‘Possum Incident’, you asked me to Google, ‘can cats have sex with possums?’”

Meow.
