
Doug and Amy left the doctor's office feeling emotionally drained. This was the third specialist that they had been to, and the third specialist who had uttered those dreaded words—not only was it impossible for Amy to get pregnant, but her body could not handle the stress A Child to Love of a pregnancy. They kept getting their hopes up, only to see them destroyed again.

Both of them blamed themselves for their inability to have a baby. Doug blamed himself, because he had put his career ahead of starting a family. He and Amy had met in college almost twenty years earlier. Doug was Pre-Law at Harvard University, and Amy was working towards a degree in Elementary Education. They became engaged shortly after graduation.

Doug was accepted to Harvard Law School and Amy A Child to Love was hired to teach second grade at an elementary school in Boston. They got married two years later. Doug and Amy had agreed to put off starting a family until after law school and after Doug was established as a lawyer.

After graduation, Doug was hired by a prestigious law firm in Boston. He worked hard to climb his way up in the firm, working long hours, including nights and weekends. On some days, he was so exhausted, that he did A Child to Love not remember how he got home or falling asleep in their bed.

Doug kept promising Amy that they would start a family “real soon”. Unfortunately, “real soon” kept being extended and before they knew it, thirteen years had passed.

Doug and Amy were thirty-eight and now that they were finally ready to start a family of their own, it just was not meant to be.
