For Jack Charles "J.C." Bahm, II, remembering you everyday means the end will never come.

Endings

Things don't always start at the beginning.

Today seems to be a special day at my house. My mom is running around the kitchen and the den upset that her new blouse and skirt don't match. I can tell that she's not too happy at how things have gone over the last three days. I can't really blame her. The phone has been ringing constantly and people coming and going at all hours. I've already told her twice that she looks good and that blouse is one of my favorites.

"Do you really think I look all right, dear?"

Yes, Mom, you do. Now Endings quit fussing about your hair and go see about Dad. I think he was upstairs in Shannon's room talking to her and Keith.

"Hon, we're on our way down now." Dad sure has a way of sounding calm and at ease whenever he says something. I remember one time, I guess it was first grade, when I got caught
