Why

I started writing to ease the pain. The keyboard was to be an outlet. As If Pluto Isn't a Planet a thirty year old mother of one I found it unbelievably heartbreaking that I could not conceive again. No one seemed to understand my struggle. I didn't really fit with the women battling complete infertility and I felt horrible complaining about not being able to conceive again. Most days I seesaw between feeling sorry for myself and feeling guilty for feeling sorry.

Those closest people to me could not imagine what I was dealing with inside because, the part of me I shared with them didn't want children or so I thought. All I ever wanted was success. I'd seen what having a family meant so kids were not an option for me. I felt I was more likely to succeed professionally than personally. You see, I had many examples of If Pluto Isn't a Planet professional success but none of personal.

I'd seen many relationships fail or proceed in dysfunction. I wanted neither. I didn't even want to chance it. I was secure in my plan of If Pluto Isn't a Planet having a successful career. Then one day something in me suddenly shifted, I found me. All the dreams I swore I never dreamed were haunting me. Everything I never wanted suddenly seemed important and I was amazed. I didn't know how to reason with myself that although I never wanted a family and children, that was all I could think about.

Then one day Taylor came home from school and inform me that Pluto had officially lost its status as a planet. Pluto was no longer a part of "My If Pluto Isn't a Planet very eager mom just served us nine pies." I was puzzled. How could a planet's status as permanent as it seemed be If Pluto Isn't a Planet changed? Suddenly I realized, if Pluto changed so could I.

Part I

The Beginning

April 2008

Oh my GOD the life I didn't plan for was finally coming into being. I was finally engaged although I'd If Pluto Isn't a Planet never wanted to be married. After three years of trying to conceive I was finally pregnant. I was getting ready to graduate from college in May. Graduating from college was one of the most important goals I'd set for myself. If Pluto Isn't a Planet Everything seemed so perfect. Wedding planning was moving along. My future sister in law and her best friend had taken over the planning process so I was free to enjoy being engaged. Everyone in both our families was eager to help with planning. My parents had opened up the Ray family vault to make sure everything I wanted, I got. When we found out we were pregnant we decided to announce the pregnancy at the end of our reception. It seemed like the perfect gift to give our families for all they were giving us.

My only worry was fitting into my wedding dress on June 29.

It's Wedding Time

June 29, 2008

Our big day was finally here and my dress fit! Everything still seemed so perfect. All of our family was in town. We got If Pluto Isn't a Planet the blessing of a brief morning shower, which I had heard was good luck. However, I was feeling so good I didn't need any luck. I was marrying the man I never dreamed existed. A dream I'd never dreamt was coming true.

The morning began with hair and make-up. Everything was busy all day. By the time the wedding began I was already exhausted but I was too excited to feel anything except the joy of the moment. Although we'd planned to make the big announcement at the reception, there was no time after all the celebrating. So we decided to tell everyone on July 4th before we left for our honeymoon.

However, by the 4th of If Pluto Isn't a Planet July we were both too exhausted from the wedding and eager to leave for our honeymoon to share our news so we took our news with us.

We spent our whole honeymoon in the hotel. I was too sick to do anything. Every time I moved I thought I was going to throw up. Although If Pluto Isn't a Planet I was sick we were both happy because we were If Pluto Isn't a Planet pregnant. Since I had no morning sickness with Taylor we automatically thought the morning sickness was a sign the baby I was carrying was going to be a boy. We considered the sickness I was feeling normal. We made the most of our If Pluto Isn't a Planet honeymoon and promised each other that we would redo it after the baby was born.

the Honeymoon is over

August 2008

By the If Pluto Isn't a Planet time we returned from If Pluto Isn't a Planet the honeymoon I was feeling relatively better but since I was pregnant I didn't think too much about feeling a little under the weather. Then while at work one If Pluto Isn't a Planet day I felt what would have been my period had I not been pregnant. I rushed to the bathroom only to discover I was bleeding. I immediately called the doctor because I did know that if I was pregnant, I should not be bleeding. I was sent to the lab for a If Pluto Isn't a Planet blood test to determine the level of growth hormone present in my blood. The lab tech told me, my doctor would contact me with the results. So after the test I rushed home. I didn't know what If Pluto Isn't a Planet to think at the time. All I could do was wait on the doctor. I didn't call Suwan. I didn't tell anyone. I just waited. When the doctor called with the lab results it became clear that we were not having a baby at all. In fact we were losing the baby.
