Introduction

My name is Mark Ortiz-Carrasco. I am a man of few friends, and I keep my life that way for several reasons. The first is because I believe that those who are close to me are always spiritually in danger. I have seen it repeatedly. The enemy attacks my ministry and while I always end up on top, those whom are closest to me end up falling away, or worse. I have heard others say it is because I leave myself vulnerable or I am too nice. All that I can say is that I stopped searching for real friends and let God bring them into my life.

While I love others with the love that the Lord has given me, I still find it hard to trust. I believe that betrayal is inevitable. Well not necessarily betrayal, however I do believe that others will do to me what feels like betrayal. Worse of all because of my ministry those closest to me will in the end pay the ultimate price. I cannot allow that. Therefore, I create barriers that distance me from others. Do not take this the wrong way, I do like having friends, but most of the time, I prefer to be by myself.

I have never been too social and so I do not care about making everyone my friend. I believe one close friend is better than a million acquaintances because I can confide in them, talk to them about anything, and know that they will always be there. A million friends never make sense if they are not true. Years ago, I lost my childhood friend Mike Pope to a tumor; I honestly have very few good friends since. One, my friend of nineteen years, Kevin, who lives in Washington, my editor and his two boys...excuse me, men, Jayden Come Home my supervisor, Kevin Falcon, and my friend Jacob.

When I met Jacob, he lived in the other half of a shared house that I was renting with my son Christian. Jacob came home one day almost in tears because he had learned that his sister was pregnant. He had already made plans to take in his grandmother, but now things were going to have to change with the addition of his sister. He was frustrated and sad. Jacob moved to get a bigger place, which would accommodate his sister, her baby, and his grandmother. We remained good friends.

Then in June, my son and I were invited to Jake's sister's Jayden Come Home (Kourtney) birthday party. From that point on, Kourtney and I became friends. It is amazing when two strangers become best friends. At least she became my best friend and I grew to love her deeply. As time went on, Kourtney began to share her story with me and as our friendship grew I found myself more and more interested in her life story. Kourtney had been the victim of adoption fraud.

I myself could relate, because my last name is Carrasco yet my birth name is Ortiz. My stepfather only adopted me so he could hide money from his ex-wife in order to avoid paying more child support. Further proof of Jayden Come Home this came the first time I ran away from home as he quickly emptied all accounts he had with my name on them. In order to adopt me several claims had been made before the courts, regarding my natural father. Jayden Come Home Those claims were simply untrue. The judge bought the lies and allowed my adoption to take place. I was not the victim of adoption fraud; I was the subject of it. Likewise so was Kourtney's son Jayden. I made it my main goal to help her. I even accompanied her to Colorado for her first trial, an attempt Jayden Come Home to get her son back.

Kourtney is an amazing young woman. She is smart, caring, and down to earth. What is not revealed in the course of this work is that during Kourtney's freshman and sophomore year of high school, she earned zero credits. I am proud to say that not only has Kourtney made up those credits, but she also is scheduled Jayden Come Home to graduate with Jayden Come Home her class, on time. In fact, she even won an award from her school for most credits earned. I am so very proud of her.

While I care for Kourtney a great deal, I cannot say that she and I agree on every topic. In fact, we disagree on many topics; however, she is like iron, which sharpens iron. Because Kourtney and I do not hold certain ideas in common, I am must to write on subjects that I may feel uncomfortable with or are not my peculiar stance. Remember that I am merely the scribe that is chronicling her odyssey. It is her story and not mine.

I love her and her brother deeply. So much so that I know that as long as Jake and I have a roof over our heads and food in our cupboards, Kourtney will never again have to live a life of homelessness and hunger. This will remain true even if she decides to move away or chooses to end our friendship.

When we started the "Help Jayden Come Home Bring Jayden Home" Campaign, I began to have people ask me about her story. What they had read was very sad, but they seemed to want to know more. I decided to put my next book on hold in order to write her story. This is her story.

Realize that the young woman that was tricked into giving up her son by an unscrupulous system and by dishonest people is a very different person that I see today. While she will still have difficulties with depression and social anxiety, I understand that they Jayden Come Home stem from her separation from her son. That is not to say that she is co-dependent upon him. I only say that she loves him and misses him deeply

So what gives Kourtney the most pleasure today? Drawing, good food, and pictures of her son Jayden. While she has many things to be proud of such as her artwork, her accomplishments Jayden Come Home with school, she is most Jayden Come Home proud of the fact that she has overcome her addictions. She has stopped cutting herself, now socializes with others, Jayden Come Home and has fun in venues quite different from those she used to be a part of. She is a different person than the young girl who exists in this book.

While she is working to make her future better for herself and, with God's help, her son, she tries not to think about getting older. The thought of getting older comes with the realization that she will have greater responsibility, and as she says, "taxes". On the other Jayden Come Home hand, she considers the best part of growing older is finally having control of her own life. Jayden Come Home That is not to say that she is not making plans for herself alone. The only difference is that she has to Jayden Come Home make plans for both roads. One with her son and one without. The thought of never seeing her son again is unbearable, not just to her, but also to those around her.

I pray this work helps bring Jayden home.

If it does indeed help bring Jayden home, then I can be happy that we waged the good fight and have done our best Jayden Come Home to triumph over all this. I have peace that I helped one of the most special people in my life and have done my best to lighten her load. If it does not help bring Jayden home, then at the very least, one day Jayden Come Home Jayden might come across this and Jayden Come Home learn what a remarkable woman his mother was. He will know the events leading up to his theft by Department of Human Services, and he Jayden Come Home will know that his mother fought for him dearly.

He will also know that Jayden Come Home along with his mother, at least two men fought alongside her to bring him home. If you ever come to read this, Jayden, know that you were loved by those who knew you, by those who loved you because you were family and by those who never knew you but wished they had.

Wherever you are, Jayden come home.

Chapter One

My name is Kortney. I was born on June first. The year really does not matter. What does matter is that one day, Jayden, you will want to know who I am, and what led us to this day. I am five foot three inches tall with blonde hair. Actually, it is dirty blonde, but I dye it. So, at any time, it could be red, green, or any other color, but for a while now it has been black. My eyes are hazel. Jayden Come Home At least the DHS lists my eye color as hazel, but for those who really notice my eyes are green with little flakes of brown in them.
