
After a mother gives birth, she is overcome with new emotions. Suddenly, another life has just become as important, if not more so, than her own. This child was a part of her; she created him and therefore, she wants nothing to harm him.

I imagine those feelings are standard in mothers, regardless of what we know in hindsight. Humans are not all equal; some are harmed; some harm others and some bring destruction to themselves. They all had mothers who loved them at birth.

I never suspected in a million life times that my son Bryan would ever be less than I had hoped for him. Being an optimist in life, I believe that people are good until proven Mother of an Alcoholic otherwise; the proverbial glass is almost full; those who deserve happiness will find it; and children brought up well will turn out well.

It was thoughts like those, unknown to me at the tender age of 20 that set me up for Mother of an Alcoholic failure. It is one of life's most excruciating downward spirals imaginable. Mothers do not always have answers. Mothers do not possess remarkable insight when given the unthinkable: an alcoholic son. Alcoholism always reaps havoc in its path, but wives can leave husbands; girlfriends Mother of an Alcoholic can drop boyfriends and friends can write destructive friends out of their lives forever. A mother is a mother forever. Mother of an Alcoholic The umbilical cord reigns triumphant.

Bryan had a destructive gene. He Mother of an Alcoholic was born with DNA that destined him to react stronger, differently and immediately to ingested alcohol than his peers. His friends noticed. At age 16, they spoke to me of how he would not (could Mother of an Alcoholic not?) stop. A few beers for the others were sufficient; but not my son. He drank until he could not function any longer. In hindsight, now, I know I should have done something. I still don't know what that something could have been, but I should have done it.

However, my own life needed attention at that time, and I gave more to it than I gave to Bryan. I had married his father, my high school boyfriend, at age 18 and had three babies before either of us was 23. Too much, too soon it turned out for my husband. During his Mother of an Alcoholic late 30s approaching the big 4-0, he decided he wasn't cut out to be the father of teenagers at such an age, that he had missed too much. We separated. Immersed in my own troubles, Bryan did what all addictive, problematic people do when an opportunity presents itself, he took advantage of it.
