Week 1

Everything does not have to be perfect on Day One. Do not allow yourself to be overwhelmed Move to the Head of Your Class: A Weekly Survival Guide for Today's Educator by the big picture. Concentrate Move to the Head of Your Class: A Weekly Survival Guide for Today's Educator on the first day, and then the Move to the Head of Your Class: A Weekly Survival Guide for Today's Educator next, until you feel comfortable with weekly, and then monthly plans.

Ask Yourself: What do I need to do to be prepared for the next day?

Week 2

Establish routines early in the year. “Bookending” is a term for beginning and ending the class with correlating activities. Starting class with a journal and ending with a reflection is an example of bookending. Even though they won’t admit it, kids like routine, and this will also make it easier for you to maintain consistency and control.

Ask Yourself What daily routines can I establish for consistency in my classroom?

Week 3

Get to know your students in an authentic manner. Relationship building involves more than “ice breakers” on the first day of school. It is an on-going process that will take the entire semester. Take an active interest in their interests. Ask them questions. Listen to their answers. If they know that you care, they are more likely to care about what you know.
