Chapter 1: What is Speed Reading?

The first element to go over is what speed reading is, and the history of it. You might know a lot about speed reading, but you certainly need to also know a bit about the history. It's important to know what speed reading is and a bit of the history of it.

Speed reading was tested by psychologists, and soon they started to see that the average person could identify small images on the screen for only one five hundredth of a second. This had an implication for reading, and soon people learned that people aren't really learning as fast as they could, only reading maybe about 80-100 words a minute. It wasn't until the 1950's however when you started to see the difference in reading speed. It was started by Evelyn Wood, who was a teacher that committed to seeing why some read faster naturally and worked on ways to help people read faster.
