I was always a shy girl growing up in the countryside. I made good grades at an all-girls school, obeyed my parents, and generally kept to myself all during adolescence. Since the competition at school was so great, the few friends I had were the others girls who worked with me at the temple down the road. My interaction with the opposite sex was limited to chatting with my cousins during The Naughty Cafe their yearly visit from Kyoto, which really offered me no valuable romantic experience at all. I was completely cut off from the ability to form any kind of relationship with a man and I was frankly sick of it.

That's why when I moved to Tokyo for university last summer I decided that I wanted to The Naughty Cafe work at the Sugar Princess Boutique. The local maid café was right by my little apartment and I thought that it might be the perfect job to help me meet cute guys in the area. At work I would serve tea and cookies to bright-eyed scholars while dressed in a sweet uniform with a frilly apron. It seemed like a dream come true, since I would have other girls to learn from when it came to whom to flirt with and what to say in order to bring in more customers and potential boyfriends. I fantasized about finding one girl in particular to be my senpai and teach me all her feminine ways in order The Naughty Cafe to make me a sexier maid. When fall auditions finally came around I had worked up enough courage to start my journey down the road to maidenhood.

I approached the café still wearing my school outfit, since the tryouts were right after my last lesson and I had no time to change. I stopped briefly in the bathroom outside my classroom to put my hair up in cute pigtails and apply a bit of makeup that I kept with me in my bag. I applied eyeliner and false eyelashes to give myself a wide-eyed look before patting on blush and some shiny pink lip-gloss. After this I rolled up the waistband of my pleated skirt to make it shorter to show off my legs. Lastly I took off my sweater and put it in my knapsack before unbuttoning the last The Naughty Cafe part of my shirt and then tying it at my waist. I thought that I looked appealing enough for changing on such short notice. I took my application out so that I would have it in hand and then made my way quickly down to the Boutique.
