Acknowledgments

IT GIVES ME great pleasure upon completing this book to acknowledge the many colleagues and friends Women and the Republican Party, 1854-1924 (Women in American History) who provided help and support. I begin with Mary Rothschild, Katherine Jensen, and Kathryn Kish Sklar. I first met Mary and Kitty when they visited the University of Wyoming, where I was an undergraduate studying with Kath. Mary came to help Kath initiate an oral history project, called “Lives of Wyoming Women,” and they hired me as one of the interviewers. This experience turned me into an aspiring historian and grounded me in the public humanities. About the same time, Kitty came to Wyoming to give a talk about teaching women’s history, and my recollection is of her facing a mostly hostile audience who doubted the field’s importance or significance; her responses to their questions made me proud to be a women’s historian and a woman. To this day, Kath, Mary, and Kitty continue to Women and the Republican Party, 1854-1924 (Women in American History) help me intellectually and professionally, and, as they well know, this book would not have been published without their active support.

I am grateful to Harriet Alonso, William Chafe, Blanche Wiesen Cook, Noralee Frankel, Janice Harris, Nancy Hewitt, Alice Kessler-Harris, Lola Van Wagenen, Stephen Wrinn, and Susan Yohn for listening to my ideas, sharing their work with me, and providing continual encouragement over the years. Many more colleagues, friends, and family members took an interest in my work and provided many kinds of help. I am especially grateful to colleagues who provided comments at conference sessions, shared works in progress and unpublished papers, and answered my queries for information, including Kathryn Anderson, Paula Baker, Mark Brady, Jackie Braitman, Clark Davis, Ellen DuBois, Rebecca Edwards, Maureen Flanagan, Anna Harvey, Gerda Lerner, Karen Madden, Donna Schuele, and Linda Van Ingen. To all of them I am appreciative.

The Friday Faculty Forum Women and the Republican Party, 1854-1924 (Women in American History) in the Department of History at the University of Vermont has allowed me to try out original ideas; I especially thank Denise Youngblood, Sam Hand, and my former colleague Doris Bergen for help and insights. I am also thankful to the individuals within the American Historical Association and the Society for Historians of the Gilded Age and Progressive Era who have worked hard Women and the Republican Party, 1854-1924 (Women in American History) to ensure that women and men historians Women and the Republican Party, 1854-1924 (Women in American History) talk and listen to each other.

The University of Vermont provided institutional help with numerous grants that enabled me to travel to archival collections and academic conferences and to Women and the Republican Party, 1854-1924 (Women in American History) take time from teaching for research and writing. A fellowship from the Huntington Library allowed me the opportunity to move deeper into nineteenth-century sources. The Huntington also provided me with a summer of Women and the Republican Party, 1854-1924 (Women in American History) collegial conversation, and I would like to especially thank Bill Deverell for helping guide me to California.

While working on this Women and the Republican Party, 1854-1924 (Women in American History) book I took on another project, an anthology on partisan women, co-edited with Kristie Miller and Elisabeth Perry. These two historians have taught me much about collaborative work Women and the Republican Party, 1854-1924 (Women in American History) and the world of their grandmothers, and I Women and the Republican Party, 1854-1924 (Women in American History) am grateful to them for their help and friendship.

My greatest debts are to Susan Ware and David Scrase, whose commitment and involvement touch every page of this book. As my Ph.D. advisor at New York University, Susan always read my work with a keen eye, provided me with a sounding board for my ideas, and encouraged me to make a place for myself in the profession. I am honored that she has chosen to continue to work with me and thank her for her always wise advice. David brought his considerable linguistic skills to numerous Women and the Republican Party, 1854-1924 (Women in American History) readings of this manuscript, and Women and the Republican Party, 1854-1924 (Women in American History) I thank him for his help with the complexities of writing and revision.

Nancy Hewitt, Harriet Alonso, and Anne Scott read the entire manuscript carefully, and I profited immensely from their comments and encouragements. Marjorie Spruill Wheeler also read this manuscript—twice—and I cannot begin to express my gratitude to her. Her thoroughness, careful comments, and generosity were crucial in shaping the final book.

Karen Hewitt took me on as one of her authors at the University of Illinois Press, and I will be always grateful that she could see that something good could come out of the unwieldy manuscript that I first presented to her. Michele May picked up where Karen left off, and I am appreciative to her and Women and the Republican Party, 1854-1924 (Women in American History) her colleagues, Theresa L. Sears and Matt Mitchell, for their work on my book.

Finally, this book could not have been written without the help of many archivists and librarians around the country, and I thank the staffs at the American Heritage Center, Bancroft Library, Bailey-Howe Library at the University of Vermont, Boston Public Library, Carl Albert Center Congressional Archives, Chebeague Island Library, Chicago Historical Society, Columbia University Library, Houghton Library, Huntington Library, Library of Congress, Mabel Smith Douglass Library at Rutgers University, Massachusetts Historical Society, Moorland-Spingarn Research Center at Howard University, New York Public Library, Schlesinger Library, Sophia Smith Collection, State Historical Society of Iowa, Harriet Beecher Stowe Center, and Swarthmore College Peace Collection for all their assistance.
